

What practitioners of Transform and Empower approaches say:

Julia Wolfson's work has challenged our staff to think, feel and act differently, in order to become true and skilled friends of people with disabilities. Through this book, you will learn to support people in ways that enable all of us to express ourselves more fully, and to make our gifts more visible.

Diane Kyd, Co-founder Camphill Sophia Creek, Barrie, Ontario, Canada

The book brings Julia's work together in a concise and accessible form. I admire the sound and consistent philosophical base underlying her passion and vision towards a world created together with those who have historically had limited possibilities to influence their situation.

Siegfried Gutbrod, CEO Camphill Farm Community, Hermanus, South Africa

Throughout my lifelong involvement in Camphill initiatives, I have become acutely aware of the need for changes that Julia's work makes possible: inherent in this process of widening perspectives into the local and global field is the empowerment of the individual; the ensuing metamorphosis supports renewal of our core principles in accordance with the time-spirit.

Judith Ingram, Leader, Vidarasen Camphill Community, Norway

Transform and Empower has been far more than an additional aspect to teaching in a special needs school. It increasingly becomes a central theme which gives a fresh and unifying perspective throughout the school: from literacy lessons to developing life skills. To truly enable each child is our aim.

Corine van Barneveld, Care Manager, The Sheiling School, Ringwood UK